'NICE JAIL' SAYS REPEAT PRISONER

Washington (D. C.) Coal Trucker Sentenced to 2nd 10-day Term for Overloading.

A month ago today Elmer G. Hollins, colored, Washington, D.C., coal trucker, was released from the county jail here after serving a 10-day sentence for driving an overloaded coal truck.

This afternoon he was re-committed to jail for another 10-day period on a similar charge. Hollins was arrested early this afternoon by Borough Officer Charles W. Culp, Jr. The truck was found to be carrying a gross weight of 15,030 pounds of coal. That was 2,030 pounds more than the truck could legally carry, the officer charged and he so testified at a hearing before Justice of the Peace John H. Basehore.

Hollins claimed that a third set of wheels under the body of the truck allowed him a maximum of 16,000 pounds. The officer pointed out that a tire was missing and a beam broken on the extra wheels, making the vehicle a hazard on the highway.

The other time Hollins was nabbed here he was taken into custody by Borough Officer D. J. Wolff. That time a brother of Hollins continued to Frederick with the loaded truck. There he was nabbed and sentenced to serve 15 days as he peddled coal without a license in order to raise funds to secure Elmer's release.

"It's a nice jail and the sheriff is a swell fellow," Elmer observed.

R. C. Anderson Discusses Birds And Forests for Biglerville Students.

A program concerning game conservation, planned for the Adams county schools, was introduced at a chapel program at Biglerville high school, Friday, by R. C. Anderson, game protector of Adams county.

Mr. Anderson addressed the student body on the serious and steadily growing problem of insect-control and the part played by song birds.

The disappearance of birds from this section is attributed to the destruction of forests and brush, which a generation ago housed many migratory birds. Today there are few places where birds can nest safely.

Uses Hawk as Example
In the course of his talk, Mr. Anderson told the Biglerville students what birds are destructive, their species, and their characteristics. The hawk was the example used. He said that were the song birds to disappear entirely, in eight years no human being would survive on the face of the earth.

The speaker mentioned distinguishing points of the common animals of these woods, their methods and reasons of hibernating, and how they are protected by nature.

This program, thus introduced, has been instituted and will be carried out from year to year by the state game commission.

5 Receive Football Letters
After Mr. Anderson concluded his talk the boys' chorus sang two numbers, "Integer Vitae" and "Noah's Ark."

Five boys were presented with football letters by Coach Thrush. They were Harold Shank, Eugene Stine, Frederick MacCauslin, Wallace Coddington and Eugene Wolff.

Songs were then flashed on the screen and the program ended in song singing of several old favorites. Charles Yost, musical director, led the singing. The orchestra supplied incidental music.

ONE MURDER, 4 MANSLAUGHTER TRIALS LISTED

Clerk of Courts Announces 19 Cases For January Court.

WITHEROW COUNT MAY BE CHANGED

Four cases of involuntary manslaughter, resulting from fatal automobile accidents on Adams county highways within the last two months, and one murder charge are listed for trial at the forthcoming January session of criminal court in Adams county.

Clerk of the Courts Roy D. Renner today listed 19 cases for trial. Several of the defendants have filed pleas of guilty to some of the less serious charges and others may follow the same course of action before the grand jury convenes, Friday, January 22, to consider their cases. All of the five defendants on the manslaughter and murder counts have indicated that they expect to stand trial before juries.

John Witherow, Freedom township farmer, is listed for trial for the fatal shooting of Fred S. Bollinger, at Witherow's home near Greenmount, Sunday morning, January 3. Witherow has admitted firing the shot, but claims it was accidental. The victim and J. Preston Null, Greenmount, only other witness to the shooting, told police the shot was fired accidentally.

4 Manslaughter Cases
District Attorney John P. Butt has indicated that he will ask the court to allow the murder charge to be dropped and will then go before the grand jury to seek an indictment for involuntary manslaughter. Witherow remains a prisoner in the county jail, where he has been held since the morning of the fatal shooting. A coroner's jury named him as the man who held the gun that inflicted the mortal wound.

The epidemic of fatal accidents on county highways during the latter part of 1936 resulted in the laying of four involuntary manslaughter charges against three automobile drivers and one truck driver involved in the fatal crashes. Each of the defendants is free under $1,000 bail for his appearance in court here when the January quarter session begins, Monday, January 25.

Those facing manslaughter counts are:

Raymond McClellan, Virginia Mills, driver of the car which collided with a sedan being driven east on the Hanover road, three miles east of here, by the late Chester M. Spence, who was at that time a member of the borough police force. The accident occurred on January 10.

DOORS AT FARM SHOW OPEN AT 8 A.M. MONDAY

Judging to Start as Soon as Exhibits Are Shown to Public.

EARLE TO TALK AT NOON HOUR

Harrisburg, Jan. 16.—Farming, once considered a burdensome task, is in a new era.

A brief walk through the state farm show building, here, where everything is hustle and bustle preparing for the opening of the twenty-first annual exhibit on Monday morning at 8 o'clock proves that agriculture is far different from what it once was.

Exhibits of the latest in electrical aids and streamlined machinery that lighten the burden, advice from a number of government agencies that have displays, the information center that Pennsylvania State college conducts, all tend to prove that the life of the farmer is on the up-grade.

While most of the cattle are acclimating themselves to their new enclosures, the majority of the produce, the horses and the poultry will arrive today and Sunday. Workmen at the building now are erecting commercial displays and the exhibits of governmental agencies.

The farmers of tomorrow and the farmer's wife of tomorrow all are getting ready to play a major part and to have the biggest time of the year in the farm show.

Vocational demonstrations of these youthful aspirants, full of good health and energy and with a zest to put farming on a professional level, will include fifty divisions of agricultural work and twenty-five of home economics. They will continue from 8 a. m. until 5 p. m. each day Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Building Closed Today While prize-winning specimens of experienced farmers and agricultural experts will win their share of recognition, much of the program will be devoted to the vocational classes and 4-H clubs.

Only employees will be admitted to the building today and Sunday; for work will have to continue constantly to get the show place ready. Once the exhibit opens, however, activity will be unleashed and will never abate until 10 o'clock each night with the final curtain Friday night.

Motion pictures, one of which the state highway patrol will sponsor in the interest of safety, will be plentiful.

Practical demonstrations of electricity in rural areas will begin an hour after the show opens, while judging will begin immediately for fat wether lambs, Merinos and 4-H club Guernsey calves.

Governor George E. Earle will speak at noon Monday preceding his departure for Washington. The exercises formally opening the show will be held at 7:30 o'clock Monday night with the public meeting in the main arena. Speakers will be Dr. Ralph D. Hetzel, president of Pennsylvania State college, and J. Hansell French, secretary of agriculture. Music will be provided by farm organizations.

Franklin Police Drain Wells in Search for Girl

Wagnersboro, Jan. 16.—State police and county authorities drained several wells Friday in their investigation of the mysterious disappearance of Jean Seville, 6, after she had left the home of her foster parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Slichter, to go to school Monday.

Two additional state troopers, M. J. Wassell and Paul Ruda, have been assigned to the case.

The road intersection, where the girl boards the bus for school, is 500 yards from the Slichter home and is in full view of the home.

The household had no knowledge that the girl had disappeared until Monday evening, when she failed to return at the usual time from school. The driver of the bus told the foster parents Jean was not on hand for the bus that morning.

Los Angeles, Jan. 16 (AP).—Elaine Jacobs Barrymore filed suit for divorce late Friday against John Barrymore, actor. She charged mental cruelty.

Mrs. Barrymore, known on the stage as Elaine Barrie, asked temporary support, but at her Beverly Hills home said she did not intend asking permanent alimony.

The divorce action followed by little more than two months their marriage at Yuma, Arizona. They separated New Year's eve when Barrymore left his wife at a night club, following an asserted disagreement over her plans to appear in a stage play.

In her complaint Mrs. Barrymore accused Barrymore of striking her at a New Year's eve party, and of threatening to "kill or seriously maim" her. She alleged that the actor called her "vile, violent, obscene, indecent, profane and opprobrious" names.

Barrymore had no comment to make concerning his wife's suit.

2 Boys, 10 and 11, Killed C. H. Bruce, Institute, West Virginia, driver of the coupe that struck and fatally injured Clyde Elwood Rinker, 11-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Rinker, New Oxford R. 3, as the child darted across the highway in front of his grandmother's home, three miles east of here on the Lincoln highway, December 24. The boy died of fractures of both legs and internal injuries before he reached the Warner hospital. Patrolman Thomas C. Mahalik, of the local substation of the state highway patrol, is the prosecutor in both the McClellan and Bruce cases.

Paul E. Lloyd, Bridgeton, York county, blamed by a coroner's jury for the death of 10-year-old Chester Griest, East Berlin, R. D., on December 26. Lloyd was driving a loaded coal truck which struck and demolished a one-horse wagon which the Griest boy was driving on the Carlisle-Hanover road, a mile north of Hampton. The boy's skull was crushed and he died a few minutes after reaching the Hanover General hospital. Highway Patrolman George S. Harleman, of the local substation, is prosecuting.

One Drunken Driving Charge George S. Sandham, Youngstown, Ohio, held for the death of Bruce Keefer, McKnightstown, on the Lincoln highway near Piney Mountain inn the night of Saturday, December 19. Sandham's car, traveling west, crushed Keefer against the rear of a clinder truck, being used by state highway employees as they spread clinders on slush-covered roads. Keefer died on the way to the Chambersburg hospital. Corporal C. A. McHenry, of the Chambersburg substation of the highway patrol, has brought the charge.

For the first time in many sessions of court there is only one defendant on the trial list who is charged with operating a car while he was under the influence of intoxicating liquor. He is Paul R. Orndorff and was arrested by Patrolman Mahalik.

The case of John Galbraith, Cumberland township, is listed for hearing before the court to settle finally the question of whether the hog that roamed the streets of Gettysburg early one Sunday morning last fall had been kept too long in the borough in violation of a town ordinance. Borough Officer D. J. Wolf is the prosecutor. The case was appealed from the judgment of Justice of the Peace John C. Shealer.

Other Cases Listed The same borough officer is the prosecutor in the case of Harry K. Ely, Washington, D. C., charged with driving an overloaded coal truck. That case, too, was appealed from the office of Justice Shealer after Ely had been twice arrested for the same violation.

Paul Lloyd, charged in the Griest death, also is listed for hearing on charges of driving an overweight truck and another count of reckless driving.

Other cases listed follow: Charles and Robert Harner, assault and battery; George Sell, open lewdness; Albert C. Klunk, larceny; Oliver Henry Snyder, assault and battery by automobile; McKinley Showers and Martha Gladfelter, serious charge; Milton Penn, assault and battery; Sterling W. Rome Press Charges Paris Cannot Control French Aid Asserts Border Provinces Are Dominated by Communists Who Will Not Obey Blum Government's Orders Not to Help Spanish Socialists.

Rome, Jan. 16 (AP).—The Italian press began a campaign Friday against communist influence in France, presented as a bar to effective non-intervention in the Spanish civil war.

Heralding the second day of Colonel-General Hermann Wilhelm Goerring's conference with Premier Benito Mussolini, newspapers charged French provinces bordering on Spain are ruled by communists who refuse to obey the Paris government.

Consequently, usually inspired newspapers contended, any agreement signed by France to keep out of the Spanish conflict would meet with difficulty in application—because of French communist desire to continue aid to the Spanish Valencian government.

Government Approval Hinted An official hinted at government endorsement of the campaign, asserting the Italian government had reports of much communist activity in the French provinces facing Spain. He did not, however, confirm directly the endorsement of the newspaper charges.

La Tribuna commented that "news on the international situation in France cannot but worry governments which at this moment are making reply to the English memorandum on non-intervention."

ESCAPE IF YOU CAN

BY FREDERICK JACKSON

SYNOPSIS: Count Vronski invites several friends to a late party at Anne Phelps' studio. First to arrive are Anne, Vronski, Karsanoff, the stunning dancer, and Bigelow, the young American from Paris. Karsanoff has shown unusual interest in Vronski, who is trying to force Anne into marriage. A shot occurs and Bigelow finds the two women staring at Vronski's corpse. They hide the body in a cupboard. The guests arrive and the party is in full swing when Karsanoff receives a phone call, supposedly from the dead count.

Chapter 11

A Plan For The Corpse

Karsanoff was carrying on a laughing, animated conversation.

"But it is too bad of you! You give a party and do not come! All the guests are here! Everyone but you!"

"She listened. 'What? . . . A friend? And just because you meet with an old friend you desert us? . . . No, I do not forgive you. . . I tell her what you say, but I do not forgive you—never! . . . Goodbye.'"

"Well—?" she cried, hanging up the receiver and turning to face the others indignantly. "Can you imagine? Count Vronski asks our pardon—but he is not coming back. He has met with an old friend."

There was a chorus of laughter and comments as Karsanoff moved back to the couch. Bigelow saw that Anne had recovered her poise and he turned to glance at Karsanoff; she smiled at him, her eyelids narrowed. He realized that she had arranged for the telephone call—probably with the aid of her maid—and the audacity of it staggered him. She had supplied them all with an alibi. All these people present would be prepared to swear that she had talked with Vronski in front of them and that he had declared he was not coming back. There remained, then, only the task of removing the body and no one would guess that he had been killed in these rooms. . . .

"Was it Anne?" himself spoke to you?" Mirabelle asked Chet Harrison.

"No, it was a woman's voice." "She was getting the number for him," declared Karsanoff. "I was quite sure in any case that his old friend was not a man."

"Not likely," admitted Mrs. Kane. The doorbell rang and Bigelow went to open the studio door. He glanced over the balustrade and saw Austrelitz climbing up.

"Is it Vronski?" somebody called.

"No," answered Bigelow.

"Oh! I thought the telephone call might have been his idea of a joke," murmured a woman's voice. No one asked who had come in; so long as it was not Vronski, nobody seemed interested. Bigelow helped him dispose of his hat and coat in the hall.

"No telling how long this will last," murmured Bigelow, "but we can't even talk until everyone has gone."

"I understand," said Austrelitz. Bigelow led him through the chattering crowds to Anne.

"This is Anne Phelps—my great friend Dr. Austrelitz," he said.

Anne looked up at him and gave him her hand. The baroness moved off leaving the three of them together.

"You don't know what a comfort it is to me to see you, here," said Anne.

Breaking Up The Party

Bigelow went off to get him a drink. Karsanoff was on her feet now, explaining to various people about her that she really must go—that she seldom stayed up as late as this—certainly never when she was dancing—and her premiere in America where she was not known at all yet was very important to her indeed and it was coming so soon. . . . She began to move about, saying 'Goodnight! . . . She went to speak to Buddy Burton at the piano, and the music stopped. Soon everybody was beginning to think of the time.

"She is breaking up the party," thought Bigelow. "She's clever as the devil."

Someone discovered Ledyard was asleep on Anne's bed among the wraps, and he was driven out of there. Mrs. Kane asked Bigelow to look for her cocktails sometime. Mirabelle Barney asked him too. And one woman he had not even talked with. Karsanoff went out to disrupt the gathering in the kitchen. . . . Bigelow rejoined Austrelitz and Anne as the exodus began.

"We'll share a taxi—you're going my way, darling!"

"Grace can easily take six."

"I never keep him up as late as this!"

"I . . . not unless I know the man—I mean unless I've met him—" in the familiar girlish treble.

"What I mean is—the East Side is so much more convenient—I!"

"Did you ever—?"

"They were gone. Nobody had seemed to notice that Karsanoff, wrapped in her sables, was still lingering on. She took Anne's hand and drew her down on the couch, as the door closed on the last guest. If the evening had been an ordeal for her, she did not betray the fact. But Anne looked pitifully white and weary.

"Now?" said Austrelitz, looking curiously from one to the other.

"Tonight," said Bigelow slowly, "a man was shot to death in this room. He was not a good man, and he deserved to die in just the way he did."

"Count Vronski—?" asked Austrelitz, looking from Bigelow to Anne and back again.

"Count Vronski," nodded Bigelow grimly. "It happened here just before the party. It was his party."

We four had been dining together earlier—and he collected the crowd that was here from the restaurant where we had dinner. But we four came on ahead to make the necessary preparations. And then it happened. We three were alone in this apartment at the time. If we had called the police, we knew that one of us would certainly have been arrested for the crime.

"Probably me," said Anne. "It was my gun."

"Perhaps Anne—" admitted Bigelow. "But certainly one of us three. And—you see—he wasn't worth anyone's suffering or dying for. So we didn't call in the police. We hid him in the cupboard, there, and Madame Karsanoff arranged with her maid so that he should seem to telephone during the evening and say that he wasn't coming back. The others were told he had gone to fetch them from the restaurant. So we have an alibi—if it isn't too closely examined. And now we have got to decide how to dispose of the body."

'Only One Thing To Do'

"In Paris," mused Karsanoff dreamily, "there is the Seine." She exhaled, watching the cigarette smoke spiral slowly upward.

"We have rivers here, too," said Austrelitz frowning, "but there would be too great a risk of being seen. And besides that, when his body was around found, there would be an inquiry—and it would assuredly come to light that he was actually last seen leaving the restaurant to come up here with you three."

"I suppose it wouldn't be possible to make him disappear so that no trace of him would ever be found?" asked Bigelow looking at the doctor. Austrelitz shook his head. "I know of no way," he answered, "no certain way, no safe way. And even if I did, I should hesitate to recommend it. It would mean months—perhaps years—of suspense and uncertainty, while people wondered and speculated and investigations were set afoot."

Bigelow nodded. Karsanoff smoked. Anne gazed into space and said nothing, her eyes agonized, her lips taut.

"What telephone did your maid use when she was pretending to be Vronski?" asked Austrelitz.

"A public telephone," answered Karsanoff with a faint smile. "I realized naturally that there might be an attempt to trace the message and so I instructed Mariushko accordingly."

Austrelitz asked then, "What excuse did you give for his abandoning the party?"

"That he had met an old friend," said Karsanoff, "presumably—a woman."

Austrelitz nodded. "There is only one thing to do," he finally decided. "Somehow, we must get him back to his own rooms."

Karsanoff and Bigelow stared at him thoughtfully.

"But won't that be terribly dangerous—?" asked Anne. "Through the streets of New York?"

"We must make it look as though he is drunk or ill," said Austrelitz. "At this hour, we ought not to attract a great deal of attention, and once we get him there, we can perhaps arrange things to look as though some woman had been there with him. If he is found there, the police will assume that he was shot there. At least, we must hope so."

"It sounds sensible," agreed Bigelow eagerly.

Austrelitz smiled. "Thank you. Where did he live?"

"He had just moved into a furnished apartment on East 58th street," answered Anne.

"What sort of an apartment house, do you know?"

"Yes, I helped him choose it. It's an old brownstone front, remodeled."

"There are no hall attendants, then—switch-board operators—elevator boys?"

"No, no one of that sort at all," agreed Anne. "You let yourself in with a latch-key and just walk up, two flights of stairs."

"At least we'll not have to devise means of getting anyone out of the way. Has he a servant there?"

"No. There isn't a servant's room. He has a valet, but he sleeps out."

Austrelitz breathed a sigh of relief. "Then it should be simple. Bigelow and I can manage it. I have my car at the door."

Gettysburg high school's basketball team captured its second straight league game by defeating Chambersburg high at Chambersburg Friday evening, 26-19. The Maroon scrubs won their first game of the season in the preliminary game, 31-10.

Coach George Forney's aggregation was forced to put on a last period rally to win. The game was evenly contested throughout the first three periods but a fast Maroon finish brought victory.

The Gettysburg offense was lacking in the first half and only nine points were garnered, five at the hands of Duterra on a pair of goals and a foul. Chambersburg led 6-3 at the quarter and 12-9 at half time.

After drawing up to even terms with Chambersburg in the third period at 19-all the Maroons forged ahead in the last period by scoring seven points. Meanwhile the stout defense of the Forney-men prevented a score.

Each of the Maroon regulars broke into the scoring column, with Duterra leading the way with nine tallies. Reese scored nine points for this game.

The locals will be idle until next Friday, when Shippensburg will be met here in a conference game.

OLD CRANKMIRE
GETS SARCASTICWhen Crankmire heard that Jack
and Gill
Had run away, as young folks will,
He shrugged his shoulders. "Well!"
said he,
"That sort of grief can't come to me."
And added, as to chat we stood.
"There's many a time I wish it could."Just then the fathers came along Enraged by such a grievous wrong.
And shouting, "With them both we're through!"
We'll cut them off without a sou!
We'll break it up! They'll rue it yet.No help from us they'll ever get."
"That," said old Crankmire, "I suppose
Will bring you peace and end your woes.
They're married now; the thing is done.
You gain a daughter, you a son,
But since just now you don't agree,
Their young lives ruined you would see.""Bad as it seems I wouldn't curse
And plot and plan to make it worse.
Could such a thing occur to me,
Though disappointed I might be,
I'd stick to them through thick and thin
And help and hope to see them
win."That night an operator said:
"Glance at this wire I'm now addressing."
And Crankmire chuckled as he read:
"Come home, you kids, and get our blessing!"

a county league game played Friday evening at Littlestown. 27-19. In the preliminary game the Arendts-

six starts by downing the Littlestown maids 34-19.Arendtsville showed the effects of lack of practice and weakened badly in the last period. The upper county courtmen were unable to use their floor except for one practice
during the last week due to improvements being made on the audi-

Today's Talk

KINSHIP

EVERY once in a while I run across "family trees" about noted persons —and some not so noted. They always interest me, but I can't en-thusiase over them.When a boy I took my "cutter" and rode through a blinding snowstorm quite a distance that I might witness a great debate between a congressman and an ex-governor. The congressman spoke first. He usually does.
He took the opportunity to say some pretty bad things about the soldierly and magnificent governor. The crowd went wild with its applause. Then came the governor's turn and these were his only rebuttal words, before he plunged into his argument: "I would rather have been a monkey 20 years ago, and a man now, than a man then and a monkey now!"The bluest and choicest blood doesn't act any too well at times. It's what a man is right now that counts most, not what he was, or what his ancestors were. Undoubtedly he owes much to those who have gone before—if they were decent and industrious, but we can't live off of our ancestors and be very happy.The great Marshall Ney found himself at a magnificent reception in Russia at one time and his royal entertainer was a woman of high rank.
She bored the Marshall for some time with her account of ancestry, then suddenly asked "By the way, Marshall, may I ask who were your ancestors?"
"Madam," replied the rugged Napoleon soldier, "I am an ancestor!"Kinship must be broader and more precious than mere distinguished blood. "Old Bill," my summer lodge caretaker, is a kin of mine. He is rough hewn, but honest and industrious. He has a healthy heart and a grin that would make anyone his friend.Whoever warms my heart, inspires my mind, or says a kind thing to me, is a kin of mine. I am fortunate in having an unusually large "family tree" in this respect. Those with whom we co-operate to make this a better and happier world in which to live, are all our close kin.Hawthorne wrote in his diary that he loved "to find the graves of men connected with literature." Apparently he felt a kinship among those who had thoughts and experiences similar to his own. In the broadest sense, we are all related, therefore we should all try to be friends and think ill of no one.high man for Arendtsville with nine tallies.In the preliminary game the Arendtsville girls breezed through to an easy victory by piling up a 23-4 lead at half time.Next Friday Arendtsville will play
at Fairfield.The summaries:

LOST—124,998 FISH

Hutchinson, Kansas (AP).—Lost—124,998 fish. Finder please notify David Baxter, puzzled chairman of the municipal fishing board here.
Baxter found all but two fish had vanished from a lagoon stocked earlier in the year with 125,000. One theory is too much salt in the water killed the fish. Another is they escaped through a drain.

MATTSONS TO LEAVE TACOMA
HOME FOR REST

Slain Boy's Father to Clear Up Remaining
Mystery Before Leaving.

Tacoma, Wash., Jan. 16 (AP).— Relentless in their search for the kidnap-slayer of Charles Mattson, officers held a much-sought ex-convict and a former mental patient
Friday night as the Mattson family prepared to vacate its Tacoma home
for a rest in "some secluded spot."

It was understood Dr. W. W. Mattson, father of the victim, would leave Tacoma with his wife and two remaining children today.

Doctor Mattson is expected before he leaves to clear up some of the mystery still veiling the 15 days of suspense between the abduction and the ending of Charles' beaten and frozen body last Monday. At the same time he will take the opportunity to thank the public for its aid and sympathy.

Some sources recalled that the children, William, 16, and Muriel, 14, who witnessed the kidnapping, evidently had not been summoned
to look through the police rogue's gallery for possible likenesses of the abductor.

Presence Not Needed
One informant said this might be taken to mean the federal agents knew who the abductor was.

The projected departure of the Mattsons suggested their presence here no longer was required by officers.

The hunted ex-convict, Fred Orrin Haynes, 46, walked into the Seattle police station Friday, sat for 15 minutes without being recognized and then announced:

"They've got me all wrapped around this kidnapping. I didn't have anything to do with it."

Although Haynes was booked on signed orders of a federal agent, A.
E. Deere, and Seattle Detective V.
E. Webb, and questioned for more than an hour, Detective Captain Marshall Scafford said he had "no apparent connection" with the Mattson case.

Police Search Cottage
Haynes, a former inmate of Fol-son prison, California, had been sought since Wednesday. A San Jose (California) woman reported renting a cottage near Seattle to a man answering his description and a woman companion. Federal agents and state police searched the furnished cottage Thursday, but reported no discoveries of importance.

Arthur Madsen, 26, who admitted once being an inmate of a hospital
for the insane in Washington state,
was held at Sacramento, California,
for investigation. Police Captain Fritz Kaminsky declined to say whether he or federal agents instigated the "hold" order against the man.

Madsen, who was arrested after a bank official reported he acted strangely, admitted, Kaminsky said, that he knew Doctor Mattson, father of the slain boy, and that a member of his family once had been treated by the physician. Doctor Mattson said, however, he did not recall the man.

Senate Approves
R.F.C.'s Extension

Senator Byrd (Virginia) Waged
Lone Fight Against Keeping Agency Until 1939.

Washington, Jan. 16 (AP).—Senator Byrd, democrat, Virginia, who has dedicated his life to lopping branches off the spreading tree of government, watched with vexation Friday while the senate gave a long lease of life to one of the largest boughs.

Vainly Byrd struggled to change
a resolution extending the lending powers of the Reconstruction Finance corporation until June 30, 1939.

He argued for one and a half year extension, contending that if the RFC's life were prolonged further, fourteen other lending bureaus would be treated likewise.
This, he said, would mean a long delay for his cherished plan to abolish some agencies, merge others
and cut the cost.

But the senate passed the administration resolution, with only Byrd dissenting. Subsequently, the house banking committee also approved

it. Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the RFC, which has lent millions to tide business and financial institutions over the depression told the committee.

"We propose to make the RFC a rare phenomenon of a disagreement between Byrd and his colleague from Virginia, Senator Glass. The latter, who also is an advocate of economy, denied the RFC extension would interfere with government reorganization plans or set up "a precedent for continuation of other agencies."

GERMANS CLOSE
CANAL TO ALIENS

Announce Special Permit Must Be Obtained to Use Kiel Waterway.

Berlin, Jan. 16 (AP).—The official marine publication Verordnungs-blatt, announced Friday night that foreign warships may enter the Kiel canal only "after having previously obtained consent by diplomatic procedure."

The new regulation is a sequel to Germany's assumption of control over all her inland waterways last November 14 in violation of Part XII of the Versailles treaty.

Violation of Peace Pact

Article 380 of the Versailles peace treaty specified that the Kiel canal,
also known as the Kaiser Wilhelm canal, be kept free and open not only to merchant vessels but also to warships of all nations.

In denouncing international control over her waterways in November, Germany said foreign regulation would not be recognized, but she did not then specifically state foreign warship. would be barred from the canal unless special permission was given.

Canal Widened In 1909

The canal extends from Holtenau on the Baltic Sea to Brunsbuttel on the Elbe river, near the North Sea.
Built between 1887 and 1895 and widened to permit the passage of the largest German battleships in 1909, the canal provides a route which enables vessels to pass from either sea without sailing around Denmark.

Prior to Germany's repudiation of the waterways section of the Versailles pact, traffic on the canal and on important rivers had been administered by commissioners representing interested nations and on which Germany was in the minority.

Hundreds Flee
Mid-West Floods

Forecast of Clear and Colder Weather Cheers Refugees in Two River Valleys.

Chicago, Jan. 16 (AP).—Hundreds of low-landers fled before the steady advance of flood waters in the midwest Friday.

Some left threatened homes on foot. Others were brought out in small boats. But the refugees were cheered by a forecast of fair and colder weather—expected to end protracted rains and check the swift rise of over-burdened streams
in the Ohio and Mississippi valleys.

Considerable damage and distress
was reported. Jay county (Indiana) officials called conditions the "worst since 1913." Railroad and interurban traffic was disrupted in the inundated areas of that state.
Nearly 100,000 acres were submerged near Evansville. Many highways were engulfed. A long freight train toppled from the rails near Edinburg. In some districts the icy waters covered houses and barns.

The brimming St. Francis river broke through a levee near Rom-bauer, Missouri, and the Black river poured through an embankment south of Poplar Bluff. National Guardmen evacuated more than one hundred families from the danger zone. One thousand WPA workmen strengthened sea walls.
Clear creek burst two levees and surged over eight square miles of farm land in Union and Alexander counties in Illinois.

More than $10,000,000 was paid in 1936 into the unemployment insurance fund of California with $4,000,000 yet to come at the year's end.

DEPUTIES VOTE
FOR NEW CURB
ON VOLUNTEERS

Unanimously Approve
French Premier's
Bill to Halt Aid
To Spain.

Paris, Jan. 16 (AP).—The chamber of deputies voted unanimously Friday night—591 to 0—to give Premier Leon Blum power to halt the flow of volunteers from or through France to the Spanish civil war.

Heeding the premier's warning that the volunteer question had become one of "saving Europe from war,"
the deputies responded overwhelmingly to his appeal to show France's
"will for peace, good will and respect for international agreements."

The vote was on the government's bill to punish French volunteers at the discretion of judges and to impose fines of 10,000 francs (460)
and prison sentences of six months or a year on persons involved in the enlistment of volunteers.

Six Months Fixed as Limit

The bill fixed a time limit of six months, as it was hoped the Spanish conflict would be over within that time. Premier Blum promised its powers would not be involved unless other nations took like action.

The premier was expected to obtain the senate's approval of the measure early next week to be ready for immediate and effective action
as soon as other powers agree on measures for controlling the volunteer tide. Little opposition was expected in the upper house.

To Press Demands on Germany

Before the vote Premier Blum told the chamber he needed the powers embodied in the bill as the only way to get "reciprocity" from Germany.
Armed with such authority he would press demands that Germany and other interested nations impose similar bans.

The socialist premier said France was willing to accept any kind of control on movement of men and arms into Spain approved by the international non-intervention committee on any part of French territory "without raising the question of our sovereignty."

During the debate the example of the Marquis de Lafayette in the American Revolution was cited by a deputy to justify earlier enrollment of French volunteers with the Spanish socialist forces to fight for an ideal. The premier dealt with this point:

"Both the Valencia (socialist) and Burgos (fascist) governments in Spain have made use of foreign volunteers. In the past that was possible—for Lafayette and for others.
But now it is a question of saving Europe from war."

Pope Postpones Academy Opening

Vatican City, Jan. 16 (AP).—Still suffering considerable pain in his legs, Pope Pius Friday delayed convening of the new Pontifical Academy of Science scheduled for next month.

The Holy Father, Vatican prelates said, hoped he might be sufficiently improved to permit his attendance later. Originally, the academy was scheduled to convene February 6. A new date was not set.

There was hope, too, the Pope might be able to celebrate mass in the chapel adjacent to his bedroom next Sunday—reclining the service from a reclining position before a special table.

Ecclesiastical law permits an invalid cleric to conduct a service in this manner.

Fascist Attack on Madrid Is Checked

Madrid, Jan. 16 (AP).—Fascist
troops battered in vain at government positions in northwestern Madrid Friday night.

Fighting raged in the University
City district as the insurgents sought to retake what they had lost
in a socialist assault Thursday.

The conflict centered around the clinic hospital, where a force of insurgents held out, although the government militiamen had taken the central offices.

The battle spread also to the U-sara region, south of Madrid, and to the Casa de Campo, to the west.

Outside Madrid, government forces were said to have gained slightly around Pozuelo de Alarcon and El Plantio, west of University City.

In the northern province of Leon,
said government accounts, socialist militiamen took important points in near Matallana and La Robla, and in the Bejar mountains.
A government decree giving amnesty to persons convicted or indiced on social, political or military charges before July 15—three days before the revolt started—won the approval of the permanent parliamentary commission.
